DETAILED ACTION

Specification

1. The title of the invention is not descriptive. Novelty is a legal concept and does not describe the invention claimed. Novelty is required of all claimed inventions before they are issued as patents. To use the term in the title would imply merit in this regard without actual examination. Accordingly, though MPEP 606.01 does not specifically refer to "novel", it is similar to the term "improve" which also implies merit without examination.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless --

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

3. Claims 1 and 2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by U.S. patent 6,200,780 (Chen et al., priority date 1997).

The '780 patent teaches a protein, PRO655 or interferon  $\epsilon$ , represented by SEQ ID NO: 1, that is identical to Applicant's SEQ ID NO: 16, which Applicant indicates is IFN- $\beta$ 2 in Figure 2. See the entire document, particularly column 7, lines 65-68, column 8, lines 1-29, claims 13, 14, 18, and 22, and the sequence alignment attached to patent. Pharmaceutical compositions are taught in column 43, lines 42-63 and claims 18 and 22. The intended use of treatment for multiple sclerosis does not change the nature of the compound itself.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

5. Claims 3 and 4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over the '780 patent in view of Polman et al. (J. Neurol. Neurosurg. Psychiatry 1999, vol. 67, pp. 561-566).

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

The '780 patent teaches as set forth above, and further teaches that interferon  $\epsilon$  is useful for upregulating the immune system (column 5, lines 1-3, claim 21). The '780 patent additionally teaches that interferon  $\epsilon$  is a type I interferon (column 54, lines 13-46). The '780 patent fails to explicitly teach that interferon  $\epsilon$  can be used to treat multiple sclerosis, as instantly claimed. Polman et al. teaches that IFN- $\beta$  is useful for the treatment of multiple sclerosis (see the whole document) and is approved for such use in the United States and Europe (p. 561, column 1). Polman et al. further teaches that IFN- $\beta$  is a type I interferon and that the type I interferons use the same receptor, and have comparable effects and a high degree of homology

Art Unit: 1646

(p. 561, column 1). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to combine the teachings of the '780 patent with those of Polman et al. to use interferon  $\epsilon$  to treat multiple sclerosis. One of ordinary skill would have been motivated to do so because the '780 patent teaches that interferon  $\epsilon$  is a type I interferon and Polman et al. teaches that one such interferon, interferon  $\beta$ , is useful for the treatment of multiple sclerosis and further teaches that type I interferons have comparable effects. Thus one of ordinary skill would have expected interferon  $\epsilon$  to have effects similar to interferon  $\beta$  and to be similarly useful in the treatment of multiple sclerosis.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

6. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

7. Claim 2 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Claim 2 recites the limitation "the mammal in need thereof". There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim; no "mammal in need thereof" is specified in the claim from which it depends.

NO CLAIM IS ALLOWED.
